"75,000 persons came to Springville to see the town's art collection."

"Every April we had to write an art theme. Oh, we would go over and sit when we had time, walk through the museum, see which picture we wanted to write about."

Beth Larsen, '54
Oral History

"Our people consider the collection a community property," says Principal Paul K. Walker. "They take pride in it. And the whole community helps pay for it. About one third of the money ($8,000 a year) needed to support the gallery comes from the students."

Letters to Alumni Bring $393 to High School Art
Approximately $393 has been contributed to the Springville high school art project as result of some 400 letters and by the Chamber of Commerce to high school art. Inviting them to the art project it was announced Wednesday by Mayor At the Chamber executive committee.

First Ward Sets Welfare Banquet
The First ward is planning a welfare banquet for the evening of Wednesday, Oct. 10, at the home of Mrs. J. W. Jones, 121 N. 1st St. The banquet is open to all and tickets are $1.00. It has proven to be a success.

Students would raise money to purchase artworks for the Collection and the Queen of the class that raised the most money would get to unveil the prize artwork in a special assembly.

National ART Exhibition
SPRINGVILLE HIGH SCHOOL
Art Gallery
Springville, Utah

The Museum was on the same campus as both the junior high and high school and all six grades (7th through 12th) would contribute to the celebration of the annual Salon. They contributed by raising money, hanging the show, and learning about the art.

In 1950 & 1951, Norman Rockwell exhibited his work 'Ichabod Crane' in the Annual Salon. The students of Draper Elementary acquired it for their collection, while the Springville High School students chose a more abstract work by Iver Rose.
